

CODED BIAS

TCA Bios

Joy Buolamwini (computer scientist, MIT researcher and film subject)

Joy Buolamwini is a researcher at the MIT Media Lab, where she works to identify bias in algorithms and develops practices for accountability during their design. During her research, Buolamwini presented facial recognition systems 1,000 faces and asked them to identify whether faces were male or female. She discovered that software found it hard to identify dark-skinned women. Her 2018 paper “Gender Shades: Intersectional Accuracy Disparities in Commercial Gender Classification” prompted companies such as IBM and Microsoft to swiftly improve their software. In 2019, Buolamwini was listed in Fortune Magazine’s 2019 list of the World’s Greatest Leaders. The magazine also termed her “the conscience of the A.I. revolution.”
