MARKET WARRIORS
is sponsored by PBS
through the support of public television viewers.

Marsha Bemko is the executive producer of Market Warriors, a new adventure series for treasure seekers. Marsha has been at the helm of the nine-time Emmy Award-nominated program Antiques Roadshow since 2003, and was executive producer of the companion series, Antiques Roadshow FYI. Bemko also is the author of Antiques Roadshow Behind the Scenes (Touchstone/Stonesong Press), published in December 2009, and she has overseen the development of Antiques Roadshow video games, iPhone and iPad applications, and popular social media sites. Prior to joining Roadshow as senior producer in 1999, Bemko worked on a variety of WGBH-produced public affairs programs for PBS. She was WGBH's coordinating producer for national programming and the series producer for Culture Shock (1999), a historical series about censorship in the arts and freedom of expression, produced by WGBH Boston and broadcast nationally on PBS. Bemko served as coordinating producer for Discovering Women (1995), a series about six women scientists, and she worked in a variety of production capacities for the award-winning Frontline public affair series beginning in 1982. In addition to her work on Market Warriors and Antiques Roadshow, Marsha is a sought-after lecturer, appearing across the country.
